2. 2. Overview of ADX-21-D

ADX-21-D is a Dante™ enabled audio amplifier for Panphonics electrostatic panel speakers with remote controlled features. ADX-21-D is designed to connect Panphonics Passive Sound Shower and Compact speakers to networked audio systems as well as professional analog installations.

ADX-21-D features:

- user-selectable power-up behavior,
- two preset EQ- filters,
- Dante interface for networked digital audio with AES67 support,
- device control through network with dedicated software or manually from the interface panel,
- an option to use Dante and analog inputs simultaneously with the device control software,
- PoE (PD 25.5W) and external PSU (sold separately), and
- an isolated input for balanced analog audio signals.

One ADX-21-D unit can operate up to:

- 3 units of 60X60 Panphonics speakers,
- 9 units of 60X20 Panphonics speakers,
- 4 units of 120X20 Panphonics speakers,
- or any combination of the above, as long as the total surface area is not more than 3 units of 60X60 Panphonics speakers.

The user can select the state of the amplifier after start-up or a power failure with the selectable power-up feature. For the three different modes of power-up for the amplifier and how to select them, see Chapter 4.2.1 Power-up behavior, page 9.

The amplifier also has a user-selectable EQ-filter. The EQ-filter features presets for Presence and Warm sound. EQ-filters make it easier to adapt Panphonics speakers to different usage situations:

- The Presence setting is a flat amplifier output with clear and crisp rising panel response. For example, it can be used in a noisy environment where the sound from the speaker needs to be heard clearly over long distance.
- The Warm setting is an equalized amplifier output with a warmer sound to compensate for the rising panel response. For example, it can be used to create a private zone for more enjoyable listening experience.

For instructions on how to select the EQ-filter, see Chapter 4.2.2 EQ-filter, page 10.

As a network audio amplifier with Dante and AES67 support, ADX-21-D makes it easy to build and design audio systems ranging from single device to hundreds of different audio devices. Adding units to the system is simple and can be done with minimum cable runs and interferences.

The basic features of the ADX-21-D can be controlled with a dedicated software through a network. It can be powered with PoE for single cord setups or with an external power supply (sold separately) if PoE is not available.

Analog input serves installations where networked audio is not used or it can be used locally as a second audio input in networked installations with the dedicated software.

3. Quick start instructions

Make sure you have all the provided equipment (ADX-21-D Amplifier, Power Supply, Power cord).

1. Connect a Panphonics speaker model with a speakON™ connector to the amplifier speaker output (15).

2. Disconnect the power supply from the amplifier (12).

4. Operating modes

4.1. Normal mode

ADX-21-D is in the normal operation mode when you switch it on. You can operate the functions with the user interface or remotely with the control software. Volume settings and the channel selection made with the interface is saved in 5 seconds after the change. The status of the mute button is not saved in the device memory.

4.2. Setup mode

In the setup mode, the presets of the power-up behavior and the EQ-filter can be changed manually from the user interface.

To enter the setup mode, press the PWR (1) button for 6 seconds.

Switch between the power up behavior and the filter settings with the Input channel dial button. The display shows “P” for the power-up behavior and “F” for the filter as the first character to indicate the chosen function.

The second blinking character identifies the chosen preset. Change the presets with the VOL↑ (6) and VOL↓ (7) buttons.

4.2.1. Power-up behavior

Power-up behavior changes how the amplifier behaves when the power is connected.

Presets:

P0	Power off until the power button is pressed
P1	Power on automatically
PL	The last used state before disconnecting the power

Change the presets with the VOL↑ (6) and VOL↓ (7) buttons.

Settings are saved at exit.

To exit the setup mode, press the PWR (1) button.

4.2.2. EQ-filter

EQ-filter changes the color of the sound between Presence and Warm.

Presets:

F0	Presence. Flat amplifier output with clear and crisp rising panel response.
FH	Warm. Equalized amplifier output with warmer sound to compensate for the rising panel response.

Change the presets with the VOL↑ (6) and VOL↓ (7) buttons.

Settings are saved at exit.

To exit the setup mode, press the PWR (1) button.

5. Software

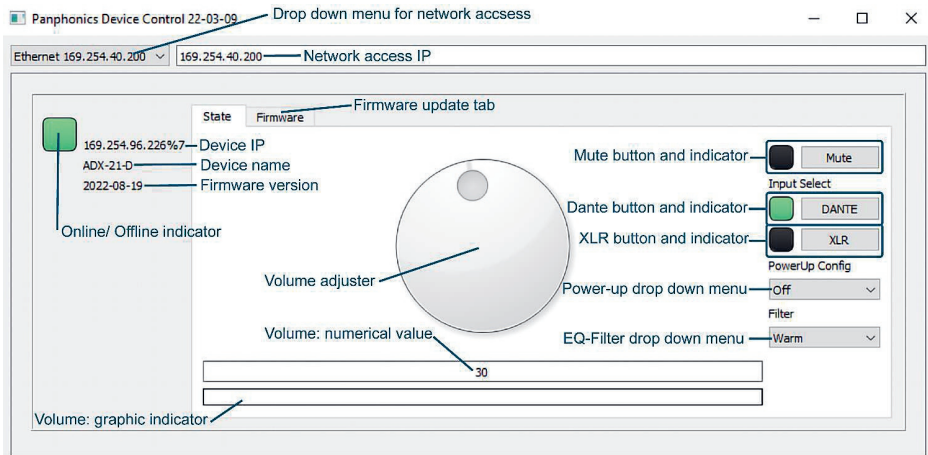

Panphonics Device Control is a dedicated software for controlling the ADX-21-D amplifiers over a network. With the software, it's possible to adjust the basic functions of the amplifiers connected to the same network from a computer remotely. The feature of using both audio inputs simultaneously is only accessed from the Panphonics Device Control software.

The software can be used on both Windows and macOS. To download the software, go to www.panphonics.com.

It is possible to control one amplifier by plugging it directly to the ethernet port of a computer or create a multi-device setup with suitable network configuration.

When the ADX-21-D amplifier and a computer with the Panphonics Device Control software installed are connected to the same network, the Panphonics Device Control software will search and display all the amplifiers available.

To use the network control feature:

1. Install the Panphonic Device Control software to a computer intended for controlling the ADX-21-D amplifiers.
2. Connect the computer and the amplifiers to a same network.
3. Open the Panphonic Device Control software on the computer.
4. Choose the network connection type or port for the computer.
5. Wait for the amplifier(s) to show up on the Panphonic Device Control software window.

For the most reliable setup, select wired ethernet connections and good quality network switches.

Communication between the control software and the amplifier is handled with UDP protocol. The amplifier's port UDP:54272 is open and the amplifier responds to the port from which the message was received. When the control software starts, it tries to bind a port for its use, starting with port UDP:54272.

Depending on the requirements of the network used, in some cases, it could be necessary to open port UDP:54272 for outgoing traffic and a few ports from UDP:54272 to UDP:54276 for incoming traffic in the networks firewall settings.

6. Dante & AES67

Dante and AES67 are protocols for network audio. Network audio makes it simple to route hundreds of audio streams in digital format in a network through suitable ethernet cables and switches. Network audio is beneficial to implement from small to large installations. Network audio simplifies the setup and makes it extremely easy to control, change, and scale up an audio system. As an added bonus, especially in large setups, it reduces cost by minimizing the cabling needs. Unlike an analog setup, a digital audio network does not suffer from interferences.

Information about Dante and available software can be found by visiting the Audinate website at: <https://www.audinate.com>

Information about AES67 and its implementation possibilities can be found from several software and hardware manufacturers.

6.1. Basic setup for Dante

NOTE

There are many settings and functions that might be essential for your needs in the Dante Controller that are out of scope of this short tutorial. For further information, consult the Dante Controller user guide.

You can do audio routing in the network and manage the amplifiers network settings with the Dante Controller software.

1. Download the software from the Audinate website.
Dante Controller software automatically discovers all Dante compatible device that are connected to the network.
2. Route devices in the Dante Controller matrix.
The horizontal axis shows the transmitting devices and their channels.
The vertical axis shows the receivers and their channels.
3. Show and hide channels with the plus and minus signs on the matrix.
4. Do the subscription between the devices on the matrix by marking the intersection points between the transmitting and the receiving channels.
Successful subscription is indicated with a green check mark.
5. To bring a device to a new system, unsubscribe the device from the Device view window on the Dante Controller software.
6. Access the device settings in the Device view window by double clicking the device names.
7. In the device settings, you can give the devices and the channels custom names and configure the IP-settings. All the routing and settings will be saved on the devices. The names, routing, and the settings are recalled after a power failure or if a device is taken out of and reinstalled to the system.

7. Troubleshooting

If there is no sound:

- Make sure that the power supply is connected to the amplifier (12) and the power is turned on (2).
- Make sure that the speaker is correctly connected to the speaker output (15).
- Make sure that all the cables have been connected correctly:
 - o Dante input (13) or
 - o XLR input (16).
- Make sure that you have the right audio input channel selected:
 - o Dante channel indicator (11) or
 - o XLR channel indicator (10).
- Make sure that the amplifiers volume level is not at the minimum level.
- Make sure that the media player is turned on and it is functioning properly.
 - o If the media player has its own volume control, make sure the volume level is not at the minimum level.
